"I Am Worried About Communism"

"Hello, there, my friend. Glad to see you on this bright Monday morning. What's on your mind? You look a bit worried."

"Well, who wouldn't be worried, with the papers full of the way Communism is spreading? I tell you, if we don't wake up and do something it is going to take the world. There is no doubt about it, they want to destroy the Bible."

"By the way, we missed you in Sunday school yesterday. In fact, I don't believe you have been with us for several Sundays."

"No. I'll tell you. I enjoy Sunday school, and I sure believe we need to study the Bible, but Sunday is the only day I have, and you know a fellow has to have some time off. I just took it easy yesterday morning, and after dinner we rode down to the beach. Took the whole family. I believe the kids need Sunday School and Church, but it doesn't do any good to make them go. But about this Communism it really scares me. Why in some countries, they have closed up the Churches . . . won't let the people worship."

"Speaking of Church attendance, we had an unusually small crowd last night. There is some talk about us joining most of the other churches, and not trying to have Sunday night services during the summer."

"Boy, I hope the preacher never agrees to that, what with all this threat of Communism. If there ever was a time when we need the Church and Christianity, it is now. Of course, I don't go to Church on Sunday night myself. You take last night. We were back in time all right, but everybody was tired, and we all stayed home and watched Ed Sullivan."

"Well, I'll see you at Prayer Meeting Wednesday. Our crowd is small these days."

"No, I have something to do every night. But I'll tell you, we had better do something about this Communism. You know, they don't believe in prayer. So long."

Pastor of the First Baptist Church,

Pastor's Paragraphs

ON MAKING FOLKS WELCOME

Jim Coker of Kentucky, tells of a recent occurrence in his small home town in Georgia, where his parents still reside.

There came to one of the churches in that community on a certain Sunday in 1955 a man who was lonely. This man was from another section of the country and wasn't a member of any church, but it seems that he had a hunger for a fellowship which he thought he might find among church people.

He must have found it, for he died a few months ago and left his entire estate valued at $178,000 to that little church. It has been placed in a trust and the annual earnings from the investment will be more than twice as much as the congregation normally gives through tithes and offerings.

Dr. Coker wrote of this event: "One of the strange things about this is that no one in the congregation remembers anything about the fellow. He must not have impressed them as they did him. Again, their treatment of him must have been a very natural thing. Maybe this is what struck the benefactor. After all, friendliness to a Christian should be as natural as breathing."

We would like to know more of the details. Was an usher standing outside the door in cold weather greeting the folks, especially the "strangers within the gate" as they approached the place of normal worship? Was the visitor identified in the service and asked to wear a visitor's button on his coat lapel? Possibly such natural courtesies as a nod and a smile from the person he sat down beside and the sharing of a hymn book; a quiet reverence that prevailed during the service and simple but genuine greetings after the service by those seated near him—made him feel a part of a fellowship for which his heart hungered. If someone from that little church would only write a study course book on The Art and Profit of Saying "Hello," maybe some of the rest of us could improve.

I am not being facetious, and I don't want to sound that way. Neither am I being subtly mercenary, in the hope that we might "hit the jackpot" with some lonely visitor. But I am vitally concerned that we come into an awareness of the fellowship of which we are a part when we are together as Christians. The radiance of such a fellowship cannot be contained. The only way one can contain it is not to have it. We may improve or change from time to time our methods and techniques of greeting, but there should always be evidence of our individual joy and delight to be with others in God's house.

One common excuse people use for not personally greeting visitors is, "I'm not sure they are visitors. There might be embarrassment to welcome a person who is already a church member." Of course, one should not make needless blunders. But don't you know how to get acquainted? Introduce yourself, it wouldn't hurt anything if you got acquainted with another fellow church member.

I'll look forward to shaking your hand Sunday!

Most sincerely,

James L. Pleity

Library Notes

How does a satellite the size of a beach ball relay TV pictures between continents? What furnishes its power, and how is it controlled from the ground? If you want to know the answers to these questions read TELSTAR, COMMUNICATION BREAK-THROUGH BY SATELLITE by L. Solomon. This book has a great many photographs.

In HIS GOOD AND PERFECT WILL by McLarry you will find an interpretation of the will of God in relation to evil and suffering. The author describes the constant conflict between the will of Satan, the will of man, and the will of God.

Mrs. Billy Graham writes about INTERLUDES IN A WOMAN'S DAY: "Winola Wirt's ability to see in the commonplace happenings of life the choice lessons the Lord would have us learn, and the wit and warmth with which she describes them makes this not only entertaining reading but a really heart warming experience."

These and many other good books are in your library, so get these and "Read and Relax" (Our slogan for the summer days).
